Mistakes Were Made

One of the more popular numismatic subspecialties concerns error coins and other oddities. Some, like the 1937 D three-legged Buffalo nickel or the 1922 D No Mint Mark cent, are caused by worn dies or weak strikes, affecting relatively large numbers of coins in a mintage. Other, less common errors include double strikes, off-center strikes, and die breaks. In these cases, only a small number of examples exist for any particular denomination.

As long as coins have been made, so have errors. Join us on July 24 at the Ortega Branch Library as Charlie Catlett reviews how ancient coins were minted, then shows examples of various error types. He also promises a few “Where’s Waldo” items, where you can try to identify the Roman Emperor hiding under an overstrike. Bring your own examples of errors, oddities, or handstruck coins for Show & Tell.

June BBQ Recap

About a dozen PCNS members and friends donned their Hawaiian shirts and gathered in Berkeley on the first full day of summer here in the Northern Hemisphere. In addition to beautiful weather and good company, we were treated to a delicious spread provided by Federico and Angela Castillo, supplemented by lively, if sometimes off-topic, conversation.

Thank you, Federico and Angela, for your generous hospitality!
